The Counseling Center is Offering Several Groups this Spring!

IUP COUNSELING CENTER Groups SPRING 2022

Research has shown that group counseling is as effective as individual counseling. Talking with other students who have similar experiences provides support and perspective.

Contact the Counseling Center by phone at 724-357-2621 or email counseling-center@iup.edu.

Masculinities

Mondays 11:00 am to 12:15 pm

This group provides a space for individuals to explore their masculine identity and personally define what masculinity means to them. Come explore the role masculine identity plays in relationships and personal challenges while also highlighting the value and benefits of their identity. (Open to students who identify as men or masculine)

Family Issues Group

Tuesdays 4-5:30 pm

This is a support group for students who have concerns related to their family. Examples of family issues may include parental abuse/neglect, substance abuse by parents, or over-involvement that causes significant distress. The family issues can be current or in the past.

Life Skills for Stressful Times

Wednesdays 3:30-4:20pm

College and Covid got you stressed out? This group is designed to help students build concrete skills to manage emotions, relationships, and self-care. Join us to learn more about yourself while building skills that are essential to improve your quality of life—mindfulness, distress tolerance, interpersonal effectiveness, and emotion regulation.

Understanding Self and Others

Thursdays 4-5:30pm

This is a therapy group where students meet with others and share who they are, learn about themselves and each other while gaining skills and insight to use outside of the therapy room. This is a meaningful way to receive multiple perspectives, support, encouragement, feedback, and to learn how to relate to others in a safe and confidential space.

Student Athletes

Fridays 10:00 am - 11:15 am

It can be challenging to balance your identity as an athlete. This group is intended for current and former collegiate athletes to feel supported, gain confidence, and learn new coping skills while acknowledging and assisting you in managing the multiple demands and pressures you experience as both a student and an athlete.

Center for Organ Recovery and Education (CORE) Visits the Respiratory Care Program @ Northpointe!

Junior Respiratory Therapy students had a visit from staff at the Center for Organ Recovery and Education (CORE) in Pittsburgh for classroom and wet-lab educational sessions on February 1, 2022! It was a unique and rare opportunity to work with human lungs connected to a ventilator and see how the lungs respond to a variety of ventilator settings and situations. Each student had an opportunity to insert a scope into the lungs to visualize the internal anatomical structures.

Emma Williams, a junior IUP respiratory care student, is the recipient of the 2021–22 IUP Northpointe Essay Scholarship for her reflection on the fear, unexpected silver linings, and deeper purpose for her future career as a respiratory therapist since the start of the pandemic. Emma states the deeper purpose of her future career by stating, “The crucial part respiratory therapists have played in the pandemic has inspired me. It has inspired a passion in me for the profession. I want to be the reason someone is able to heal from COVID and go home to their family. I want to be able to work beside other healthcare professionals to give treatment to patients suffering from the virus.”
