Part II. Description of Curriculum Change

Part II. 1. Catalog description for the revised program:

The Department of Criminology offers students seeking careers in criminology a broad liberal arts education that encourages them to think critically about crime and justice issues and also prepares them for careers in the criminal justice system. The degrees offered are the Bachelor of Arts with a major in Criminology and the Bachelor of Arts with a major in Criminology Pre-Law track. Additionally, students enrolled in the Computer Science/Information Assurance Track may minor in Criminology. Through the School of Graduate Studies and Research, the department also offers graduate work at both the master's and doctoral levels. The program in Criminology has a fivefold objective: 1. The education of students for employment and leadership

- in the expanding field of criminology and criminal justice
- 2. The education of presently employed criminal justice personnel who recognize a need for furthering their education
- 3. The instruction of students who wish to acquire an understanding of the processes of criminal justice as a cultural part of their higher education
- 4. The instruction of students who wish to prepare for graduate study and/or research in criminology
- 5. A curriculum that provides an excellent foundation for students preparing for a career in law Nearly every level of government offers opportunities for professional careers in criminology. For example, employment opportunities normally exist in more than fifty federal agencies (e.g., Federal Bureau of Investigation, U.S. Department of Treasury, Federal Bureau of Prisons). Graduates also will find employment in local and state organizations including law enforcement (e.g., Pennsylvania State Police, various municipal police departments) and correctional agencies (e.g., probation, parole, Pennsylvania Department of Corrections). Additionally, there are a wide variety of opportunities in the expanding fields of private, commercial, and industrial security, including cybersecurity. Furthermore, many governmental agencies have specialized units dealing with juveniles, community relations, training, education, and research. Career opportunities also are available in research and teaching at the college and university levels and in research divisions of various agencies.

2b. Associated course changes.

- 1) Catalog description change in availability of a Criminology minor (proposal submitted).
- 2) 6 credits of criminology electives changed to 6 credits of free electives
- 3) Major required course credits reduced from 39 to 33.
- 4) Free electives credits increased from 9 15 to 15 21.
- 5) Comment (1) removed as it no longer applies.
- 6) PHIL 110 added as an approved Philosophy Pre-Law course (UWUCC already approved course).

3. Rationale for change. Reducing the major required credits to 33, places the criminology department's major requirements closer to the other social science programs on campus (i.e., Anthropology, 36 cr; Economics, 27 cr; Political Science, 33 cr; Sociology, 33 cr). Additionally, the criminology department supports the UWUCC's belief that any degree program is stronger if it includes the opportunity for students to select freely at least some courses that reflect their own intellectual interests (Undergraduate Curriculum Handbook, 2009 [R], p. 87).

Part III. Implementation

Part III. 1. How will the proposed revisions affect students already in the existing program?

Students in the existing program will be informed of the change (if approved) and will fall under the new proposal revisions, which permit them the latitude to select classes outside the discipline to complete their elective requirements, but does not preclude them from selecting classes from inside the discipline to complete their elective requirements. Any criminology electives already completed other than the 18 required criminology controlled electives would fall under the category of free electives.

Part III. 2. Are faculty resources adequate?

The reduction of the criminology electives releases faculty assets to facilitate required criminology courses.

Part III. 3. Are other resources adequate?

The reduction of the criminology electives reduces the resource requirements for the department.

Part III. 4. Do you expect an increase or decrease in the number of students as a result of these revisions?

The revisions will have no impact on the number of students in the department.

Part IV. Periodic Assessment

Part IV. 1. Describe the evaluation plan. Include evaluation criteria. Specify how student input will be incorporated into the evaluation process.

Long-term program assessment is conducted through the five-year review, which incorporates both an outside reviewer and input from current and past students. Annually, informal program assessment is conducted by the department's undergraduate curriculum committee; with input from the Temporary Faculty Screening Committee, the Criminology Teaching Circle members, the Criminology Advising Center, the Department's Executive Committee, and student input solicited or unsolicited by faculty members and the criminology advising center. Additionally, the department's program content is compared to other nationally ranked programs (i.e., University of Maryland, SUNY-Albany, Sam Houston State, etc.). The multiple source information is distributed/shared through various venues with the faculty members and the department's chair. Any shortcomings are then addressed through policy recommendations to the faculty from the appropriate committee (undergraduate curriculum committee, executive committee, advising center, etc.).

Part IV. 2. Specify the frequency of the evaluations.

Program evaluations are on-going and issues are addressed as identified. A formal program assessment is conducted every five years, but semester and annual program evaluations are conducted by the department's undergraduate curriculum committee at the beginning and end of each semester, focusing on retention, recruitment, student issues and concerns, advising center data, etc.

Part IV. 3. Identify the evaluating entity.

Internal assessments are ongoing, with the primary evaluating entity being the department's undergraduate curriculum committee with input from other internal and external committees, individual faculty members, students, and the advising center. Long-term assessments are a combination of internal and external evaluators.
