COMPONENTS OF A PROPOSAL FOR A WRITING-INTENSIVE COURSE:

I. "Writing Summary"--one or two pages explaining how writing is used in the course. First, explain any distinctive characteristics of the content or students which would help the Liberal Studies Committee understand your summary. Second, list and explain the types of writing activities; be especially careful to explain (1) what each writing activity is intended to accomplish as well as the (2) amount of writing, (3) frequency and number of assignments, and (4) whether there are opportunities for revision. If the activity is to be graded, indicate (5) evaluation standards and (6) percentage contribution to the student's final grade.

II. Copy of the course syllabus.

III. Two or three samples of assignment sheets, instructions, or criteria concerning writing that are given to students. Limit: 4 pages. (Single copies of longer items, if essential to the proposal, may be submitted to be passed among LSC members and returned to you.)

Please number all pages. Provide one copy to Liberal Studies Committee.

WRITING SUMMARY - SP 412 "The Spanish Novel of the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries"

SP 412 The Spanish Novel of the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries is proposed for identification as a "W" course. The course is taught every four years. Most students in the course are juniors or seniors. The course is taught in Spanish, therefore, those who take the course are almost all Spanish majors or minors. Since the course is taught in the target language, enrollment is not expected to exceed 20. The course counts as an elective toward a Spanish major or minor.

There are five basic types of writing in this course:

1. WRITING TO STIMULATE THOUGHT. Students will be keeping a "journal" in Spanish of their reading experience. Since reading novels in the target language can be a frustrating experience, the journal notations, comments and personal reactions will serve as a basis for class discussion of the novels. This writing will not be formally evaluated, but credit toward the class participation grade will be given for this writing. The journals will vary in length, depending on the individual student (estimated 10-30 pages). Similarly, short group writing assignments in class or individual writing which is peer edited (estimated 4-10 pages) in class will be used to stimulate thought and discussion and will contribute to the class participation grade though not formally evaluated by the instructor.

2. WRITING FOR EVALUATION. There are two major examinations and a final exam. Each has three types of questions: identification, short answer or fill-in and essay (see enclosed sample exam and final exam). The essay questions count 40% on the two exams and 50% on the final exam. There is a choice of questions for the essay part of each exam. In evaluating the essay questions, organization of ideas is more important than grammatical correctness.

3. WRITING TO ENHANCE READING. Students read six Spanish novels in this course, each of which is the basis for class discussion. While their journal writing serves as preparation for discussion, their reaction papers, written after the novel has been studied and discussed, serve to summarize their ideas and bring their thoughts to closure. Students write three of the six possible reaction papers, each of one and one-half to two typed pages. The topics are broad enough to allow for personal reaction, while being based on the specifics of each novel. These papers are evaluated for ideas and organization, grammar and mechanics. Each reaction paper counts 5% toward the final grade, for a total of 15% (see enclosed sample reaction topics).

4. WRITING TO INTEGRATE LEARNING AND THINK CREATIVELY. Early in the semester students will be asked to think about and consult with the instructor on a topic to serve as the basis of a research paper of six to ten typed pages. After a topic is chosen and some preliminary library research is conducted, a thesis statement will be formulated and revised based on further research. By midterm time, an outline will be composed. During the second half of the semester the students will complete their research, compose a bibliography and write a rough copy. After review and consultation with the instructor, the final copy will be prepared.

5. NOTE TAKING. Students will take notes in Spanish during lectures. This writing will be neither collected nor graded.

COURSE SYLLABUS

I. CATALOG DESCRIPTION

Spanish 412 The Spanish Novel of the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries
3c-01-3sh

Analysis of selected novels from three major periods: the nineteenth century, the Generation of 1898 and the post Civil War.

II. COURSE OBJECTIVES

The Spanish Novel is taught in Spanish and is designed as an introduction to the genre of the novel in Spain.

1. Students will read and analyze six novels representative of three important periods in the development of the Spanish novel: the nineteenth century, the Generation of 1898, and the post Civil War.

2. Students will also acquire knowledge of the historical/social/political situations important to the development of the Spanish novel, and the contributions of other significant Spanish novelists.

3. Students will participate orally in class discussions.

4. Students will participate in writing in Spanish in the following manner:

a. They will write three short (one and one-half to two typewritten pages) reaction papers on a topic provided by the instructor. There will be six topics given, one for each novel; each student may choose any three during the semester.

b. They will write a six to ten page research paper typed according to the MLA style. The topic will be some aspect (chosen by the student and approved by the instructor) of literature from the time period of the novels studied. Early in the semester a topic will be chosen; following preliminary library research a thesis statement will be formulated. After additional library research the thesis will be revised and an outline composed. During the second half of the semester the students will gather information, compose a bibliography and write a rough copy. After review and consultation with the instructor, the final copy will be prepared.

c. They will take notes in Spanish when there are lectures. In addition, they will be taking notes in Spanish as they read the novels. These notes will be a "journal" of their reading experience, including frustrations, personal reactions, and material from the novels which will contribute to comprehension and serve to stimulate class discussion.

d. The two exams administered during the semester are 40% essay. The final exam is 50% essay.

Translated Sample Reaction Paper Assignment

Mariánela by Benito Pérez Galdós

Write a short (one and one-half to two page) paper on one of the following topics. Include both your own thoughts and opinions as well as evidence from the novel to support your view. Your paper will be evaluated on the basis of your ideas and the organization of the paper as well as the grammar and mechanics.

1. Why does Mariánela die?
2. What are the differences between the novel Mariánela and the movie version? Are these differences significant? Which do you prefer, and why?
